When the resolution introduced by Senator White, and extending the same privileges to exhibitors at the midwinter fair as had been previously granted for the Columbian exposition, was adopted, the parties in this city who have been en-gaged in evading the exclusion laws, were quick to see the opportunity to bring in another batch of Chinese under cover of bringing them to the fair at Chicago, and as a result 275 laborers were landed despite the opposition of

LIVELY TALKING

Heard by 2,000 People at the International Prohibition Convention.

PROHIBITION PARE, N. Y., June 6.— The closing session of the International Prohibition congress here was marked by some lively scenes.

Rev. Dr. A. A. Miner of Boston, in an address charged the Republican party with repealing a prohibitory law in Mas-sachusetts, and accredited the Neal Dow prohibitory law in Maine to the Democrats. Mrs. Bryant, a delegate, said there was no Republican party in Maine when the prohibitory laws were made.

Dr. Miner also said that the press of both parties is in league with iniquity and are well paid for it. He denied that Governor Tillman had captured the convention for South Carolina dispensary laws and when he asked how many favored it only seven of the 2,000 people present arose.

The Rev. T. B. Wakeman, of New York, followed Dr. Miner. The prohibition theory, the speaker said, could not office Hours: 8 to 10 a.m., 12:80 to 8 p.m., 6:80 to 7:30 p.m. succeed because it was wholly theocratic in nature. "You have not succeeded in Kansas, Iowa or Maine, and you cannot succeed under your present system. You must change from theocracy o scientific common sense. Your prohibition arguments are in direct opposition to our Republican form of government. Yesterday you worshipped Governor Tillman when he addressed you, and to-day you repudiate him. Dr. S. N. Burgen had a very exciting experience yesterday. He was called to the country to see Reece Bickel a young man about 23 years of age. He found him suffering from an aberation of the mind, but not thinking him violent, it was arranged for the young man to ride with him in his buggy to town where his brothers reside and could take care of him. The brothers followed in another vehicle. Soon after starting the doctor's companion became wild and seizing the reins and whip lashed the horses into a run which was kept up till they reached the city, the doctor be ing powerless to help himself. The brothers followed as closely as they could and when he finally stopped the team at their house, succeeded in overpowering him and getting him in the use, when Dr. Burgen administered an opiate and he has been kept under its influence ever since.

SOME GOOD STORIES.

IN WHICH VARIOUS PHASES OF HU-MAN NATURE ARE SHOWN.

Jenator Vance as a Wit of the First Order. The Parrot That Wanted to Know-Two Tales About Robert Bonner and Dr.

The late Senator Vance used to say that his liveliest campaign for the governorship of North Carolina was that in which Judge Settle ran against him. They stumped the state in joint debate. All the white Demoand kissed a dozen or so of the young beantles and then paused long enough to turn around toward his competitor and shout: "Settle, I'm kissing my girls! Now you kiss yours!" Kate Field's Washington says of him that when he married the second time he said to his wife on their wedding day: "My dear, I'm a stubborn fellow, and you may anticipate trouble. Now, in the beginning, while I am submissive, I want to give you one piece of advice. If you fol-low it, we'll get on mighty well. It is this: Make me do just as I darned please." A newspaper man who was starting for a rather out of the way portion of Vance's own state was asking him one day what kind of accommodation he was likely to kind of accommodation he was likely to find. "They'll give you some of their fried hog and eggs," the senator replied. "That's better than nothing," said the newspaper man. "I don't know—I don't know," the senator answered in a dubious tone; "I've tried both."

A collection of parrot stories that have gone the rounds would, if gathered into book form, make a most respectable vol-ume. One of the best of these is about a certain bird that was in his cage, which hung on the balcony of its owner's house in a southern city.

One day a vender of kindling wood came along, and nearing the house he shouted out in the unvaryway assumed by his craft,"W-o-o-d, w-o-o-d to sell!" When he arrived opposite the house where the parrot was, that bird aroused himself and lustily replied, "Put it down cellar." The dealer, to whom the house was familiar and was, that without stopping to inquire, supposing the voice came through the open window, at once passed round to the side of the house and dumped the load down through the cellar door. A few days later he came around and presented his bill to the owner. "Why, I didn't order any wood," exelsimed that individual.

"Yes, you did, sah," persisted the wood "As I was pawsing by I heerd a voice sayin, 'Put it in de cellar,' and dat's

"Oh, you heard a voice did v the man of the house, and looking up he caught sight of the parrot, who was un-concernedly blinking one eye. "Well, I know who it was. It was that d-d parrot!" and reaching up into the cage he grabbed the unfortunate bird by the tail and swung it around his head and banged it up against the side of the house. Then he took it in the back yard and gave it a toss over on the ash heap. The parrot, to all intents and purposes dead, lay there all night. The next morning consciousness returned, and slowly gathering himself up he stood upon his feet. Then straightening out one leg and then the other he look-ed around, and his eyes fell on the carcass of a dead cat that was lying on the other side of the heap. Then he exclaimed as he ruefully gazed on the remains: "Umph! What did you order?"

The peculiar idea of punishment held by some parents has never been better exemplified than in a story told by W. R. le Fanu,

Speaking of the factional fights which were such a regular feature of life in the county he once lived in, he goes on to say that just after one of these fights at the fair of Abington, which he witness ed from the opposite bank of the river, he saw an elderly man running after a young

"Why," said Mr. le Fanu to a man standing near him, "does that young fellow let that old man beat him in that savage way?"

"Ah, sure, your honor," said he, "that's only his father that's chastising him for fighting."

The progress that woman is making to-day extends into all spheres, and it is nat-ural that in love matters she should not be The following incident is vouched for by the Detroit Free Press:

The young fellow was extremely diffident and very much in love with the girl. He had made half a dozen attempts to offer her his heart and hand, but on each occasion he had fallen short. To add to the seriousuess of the situation, the girl was ready to accept him as soon the proposal was in shape. Even the mother was willing, but latterly she had grown tired of the dilatory tactics and Fabian policy of the suitor and had kicked on his coming so often

The youth stopped short, but held on.

"Mary," came the maternal voice querulously, "is that young man there yet?"

"Not yet, mother," replied Mary, smiling sweetly down on the face of her Romeo, "but he's getting there."

And two weeks later the cards were out.

Robert Bonner went to the New York Herald one day and asked the business manager, Mr. Elliott, if he could have a page of The Herald for next morning. Mr. Elliott said, "Certainly; two if you like."
"Then I'll take four," said Mr. Bonner.
"All right. You

It was so printed next day. It was the announcement of a new serial blood and thunder story by Sylvanus Cobb, Jr. The morning the advertisement appeared Mr. Bonner's minister rushed to his office to remonstrate with him on the ex-travagance and absurdity of paying 48 times for the insertion of the same insignificant announcement. "Now, why did you do it?" the minister asked. "I had two reasons," Mr. Bonner replied. "I was not going to be bluffed by Joe Elliott, and I wanted to find out if you read The Herald,
